

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

EDITOR'S NOTES.

Mr. Ashmore's article in this number forms a fit conclusion to the story of the Confederate Treasure contributed by him to the September Quarterly. We are glad to give it to our readers, who will, we are sure, be pleased with an account of the Virginia banks funds which, although taken along with the money held by the Confederate Secretary of the Treasury, were, contrary to common belief, not a part of the same.

The Georgia Historical Society has recently received as a gift from our generous member, Mr. J. A. G. Carson, a valuable collection of books from his private library, mainly relating to the history of the City of Baltimore and the State of Maryland.

The Library has also come into possession of books of more than ordinary interest presented by Mrs. Anna B. Karow, the family of the late General W. W. Gordon, and Mr. Charles P. Connery, during the year just closed.

A handsome volume has very recently come to the Library from Mrs. Kate Flannery Semmes, compiled by her husband, the late Mr. Raphael T. Semmes, on "The Semmes and Allied Families," and just printed. It is a valuable addition to the costly collection bequeathed to the Library by Mr. Semmes, to which the widow added a number of useful publications as her personal contribution.